

Rising proud to an altitude of 5,000 feet above sea level and encompassing 4,000 square miles, the Banaue Rice Terraces - often called the Eighth Wonder of the World - were carved with bare hands and crude implements by Ifugao Ancestors more than 2,000 years ago, transforming the barren stone mountains of the Cordillera into arable ledges where rice can grow.

Banaue is 8 to 9 hours ride from Manila via Nueva Ecija passing through a long stretch of rice, vegetable, tobacco and sugarcane plantations. But the long ride is worth the wait once you become part of Banaue even for just a few hours.
